

Regulatory Update – South Africa

CEO of the National Regulator for Compulsory Specifications (NRCS) in South Africa has resigned.

PCS has recently received news that the CEO of the National Regulator for Compulsory Specifications (NRCS) in South Africa, has resigned from his position, citing frustrations with the inefficiency of the organisation and of lack of cooperation from the South African Department of Trade and Industry.

This development may cause even further delays to the lead-time for Approvals at NRCS, which has been recently observed to increase from 120 working days to around 200 on average.

PCS will continue to monitor the situation closely and to keep stakeholders informed regarding the future impact of this development on applications.
